Customer Satisfaction

Your own understanding of customer satisfaction will be far enough if every one of your employees remains moved in the Dark Ages. Every employee should be made aware of your own responsibility as fixing the customer's problem. If you've been in business for a while, you've already seen your share of cases where the customer's problem was resolved, but the customer was still unhappy. The most common cause of this potentially fatal mistake is employees (or owners) who have allowed themselves to become isolated from the customer's concerns. It's up to you to make certain that all of your employees understand that the ultimate goal of your combined efforts is a satisfied customer, not just a sale.

8 Don't overlook your employees as a source of ideas to improve your operation.

No one is closer to your customers and their opinions than your own employees. Acknowledgment and respect from employees. Workers who are respected by their bosses and whose contributions to the business are being ignored.

You treat the important

When you begin the search for a customer on hold for more than a few minutes, you've already alienated the customer. Always answer the phone or answer the door for yourself by name. If you can't find the information you need within a minute or two, volunteer to call the customer back. And always, ALWAYS, call the customer back when you have promised to do so. Even if you haven't been able to find all the information you need, don't force the customer to wait for a call that never comes.

5 Train every employee to be an important member of the Customer Satisfaction Team.

Your own understanding of the importance of customer satisfaction will be the first step if even one of your employees remains indifferent in the Dark Ages. Every employee should be made aware (and be continuously reminded) that "fixing" the customer is just as important as fixing the customer's problem. The most common cause of this potentially fatal malady is employees (or here) who have allowed themselves to become isolated from the customer's concerns. It is your ultimate goal of your combined efforts is a satisfied customer who will be the first to buy from you again.

7 Make sure that you treat the telephone as an important business tool.

Your customer experience with your store begins the exact moment that one of your employees answers the phone. Make sure that your telephone is always answered and respect the customer's time. Never allow it to ring more than three or four times. Have a customer on hold for more than a minute or two and you are likely to lose the sale. And always, ALWAYS, call the customer back when you have promised to do so. Even if you haven't been able to find all the information you need, don't leave the customer to wait for a call that never comes.

8 Don't overlook your employees as a source of ideas to improve your operation.

No one is closer to your customers and their operations than your own employees. Acknowledgment and recognition are two things that employees need to stay motivated and committed to their jobs. If you are a small business, you should have a program that makes it a point to reward your employees for their contributions to the business. If you are a larger business, you should have a program that makes it a point to reward your employees for their contributions to the business.

6 Don't make a mistake, own it.

When you find only a few mistakes in all others. You and your company are not perfect. You are only a human, or that is what you are.
