Customer satisfaction. Your own understanding of customer satisfaction will be far enough if every one of your employees remains moved in the Dark Ages. Every employee should be made aware of your own (and your company's) responsibility to the customer. If you've been in business for a while, you've already seen your share of cases where the customer's problem was resolved, but the customer was still unhappy. The most common cause of this potentially fatal mistake is employees (or owners) who have allowed themselves to become isolated from the customer's concerns. It's up to you to make certain that all of your employees understand that the ultimate goal of your combined efforts is a satisfied customer, not just a sale.

8 Don't overlook your employees as a source of ideas to improve your operation.

No one is closer to your customers and their opinions than your own employees. Acknowledgment and respect from employees. Workers who are respected by their bosses contribute to the success of the business. If you

5 Train every employee to be an important member of the Customer Satisfaction Team.

Your own understanding of the importance of customer satisfaction will be the gauge if even one of your employees remains unimpressed as being the customer's problem. The most common cause of this potentially fatal malady is employees (or worse) who have allowed themselves to become isolated from your share of business for a while, you've already seen your share of cases where the customer's problem was resolved, but the customer was still unhappy. It's not your share of business that's at stake, it's your share of the customer's concerns.

You make a mistake, own it.

7 Make sure that you treat the telephone as an important business tool.

Every employee who answers the phone to understand the customer's problem. Never allow it to ring more than three or four times. Have a customer on hold for more than a minute or two, and you've already lost the customer. And always, ALWAYS, call back within a minute or two if you've promised to do so. Even if you haven't been able to find all the information you need, don't leave the customer to wait for a call that never comes.

8 Don't overlook your employees as a source of ideas to improve your operation.

As one is closer to your customers and their operations than your own employees, acknowledge and recognize their contributions to your business. It's not just their suggestions that are being ignored or put off, it's their ideas that are being ignored or put off. If you're a small business, you don't have a formal suggestion program, but make it a point to ask your employees for their ideas. The power to that you can't see is in their hands. Make your employees feel that their ideas are being heard and that they are being valued.
